In a telephone in view on June 28, 2004 with Robert Ambrose, he elected co-polyester for the species of claim 18 in accordance with the election of species requirement.

Applicant urges that 1) because the groups are so closely related, full consideration of one Group would consist of a search, which includes the other Groups.

Simply stated, applicant has failed to state how the groups related to one another and what is this search that include the other Groups in full consideration of one Group.

Applicant concludes that 2) Group IV a non-woven and Group III are not mutually exclusive species since the non-woven dependent of the fiber.

On one hand, Applicant wants, for restriction purposes, Group IV and Group III together. On the other hand, for examination purposes, applicant admission that groups are no mutually exclusive should not be used in rejection against applicant. The restriction clearly show serious bourbon on the Examiner by the different classification (442 and 428) and fiber intermediate product lose its identity in the final product.

Applicant urges that 3) Group I process should be rejoined with Group III fiber upon allowability of Group III.

Only if the process claims includes all the limitation of the allowable product will the process be rejoined. See MPEP 821.04. The rejection is deemed proper for reason of record and hereby made FINAL.

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 16, 17, 19 and 21 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being clearly anticipated by Pike (US 5,721,180).

Pike, a Kimberly Clark Patent, teaches a filter medium comprising crimp multi-component bi-component filaments of polyethylene and polypropylene. Pike further teaches the polypropylene is 50% wt and contains 50% wt TiO<sub>2</sub>. See example and column 2, lines 12 and 47. Pike still further teaches the filaments can be in a side-by-side arrangement or eccentric sheath core. Note TiO<sub>2</sub> is the dielectrically susceptible material.

(a) the invention was known or used by others in this country, or patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country, before the invention thereof by the applicant for a patent.

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 16, 17, 18 and 21 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(a or e) as being clearly anticipated by Lintecum (US 6,548,429).

Lintecum teaches a yarn comprising bi-component yarn filaments in a side-by-side configuration having a first and second component, which can be polyamide, polyolefin's, polyethylene, polypropylene, and polyester and copolymers (which includes copolyester). Lintecum further teaches the bi-component filament can be arranged in an eccentric sheath core (or side-by-side) and have crimps. See column 3, lines 20-39. Lintecum also teaches the bi-component filament may contain carbon black or titanium oxide in the filament of the yarn. See column 5, line 33 and column 19, line 59 for example.

Claim 20 is objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
